Notes

Plan your trip in late July to October if using the campground, August to April if using the cabin. Do not plan your trip from mid-May through mid-July! While the AT is always busy, this is when the north-bound thru-hikers come through Shenandoah and there will not be any camping available at the huts.

Loft Mountain Campground generally opens sometime in May and closes the end of October. Since the sites are first-come, first-served, the campground often fills to capacity on weekends. Plan to arrive by 4:00 p.m. on a Friday or Saturday (earlier on a holiday weekend).

Options

Doyles River Cabin is available for rent from the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club (www.patc.net).

You must make reservations in advance. Change your route as follows:

Day three (8.4 miles): AT south for 8 miles, turn left to cabin, 0.3 mile (Doyles River Trail).

Day four (6.0 miles): Turn left onto AT, AT south for 5.2 miles.

To make this a winter trip when Skyline Drive is closed, you'll need to use the cabin (the campground will be closed) then exit at Madison Run Fire Road Boundary (State Route 663). On your last day leave the hut, hike north a short distance on the AT, then take Trayfoot Mountain Trail, Furnace Mountain Trail, and Madison Run Road to reach the boundary. Be sure you have a good map along if you might take this route.
